

Death in Custody

Data Set Overview and History

The Department of Justice (DOJ) Criminal Justice Statistics Center (CJSC) collects information on death in custody (DIC) in California. The DIC data are reported by law enforcement agencies (LEA) in compliance with California Government Code (GC) section 12525. Contributors include: California LEAs (sheriff, police, etc.), county probation departments, state correctional facilities, and any other local or state agencies with peace officer powers. Reporting agencies are to submit the required information within 10 days of the death. Additionally, an annual survey is conducted to verify the total number of subject deaths per agency per calendar year. The DIC data collected and survey is used to provide descriptive statistical information on the circumstances related to the death.

GC section 12525 passed in 1961 and different programs within the DOJ had record keeping responsibility over the DIC data until 1986, when it was transferred to the Bureau of Criminal Statistics (now known as CJSC). Throughout the life of this data set, there have been multiple iterations of the data structure documented between 1961 and 1986. One of the most significant changes stemmed from the implementation of the federal Death in Custody Reporting Act of 2000 (Public Law 106-297). The CJSC rolled out these changes to LEAs between 2003 and 2005. These changes augmented California's existing collection by adding data elements related to in the process of arrest/arrest related death information. The year 2005 represents the first full year of collection under our current collection methods and standards.

Statutory Authority

The DOJ is mandated to collect DIC data pursuant to GC section 12525.

Data Characteristics and Known Limitations

1. Unlike other CJSC collected data, the CJSC does not close out the DIC data file on a yearly basis. Rather, this is an open data set that is continuously updated as new information becomes available. As such, special attention should be paid to the date the data was extracted as the data is subject to change.
2. There are no specific limitations for the DIC file. Data included in the file are accurate and reliable to the extent that they are reviewed by the CJSC for validity and consistency of logic and are complete to the extent that the reporting LEAs fulfilled their individual reporting obligation.
3. The CJSC is statutorily mandated to collect, not investigate, the data from the specified LEAs; it is not an investigative body. The CJSC acts as a repository for the information submitted to by reporting agencies; collecting, entering, and maintaining the data set; and reporting on it when requested.
